Hunt Midwest Enterprises, Inc.
Hunt Southwest Real Estate Development, LLC

Ora Reynolds is president and CEO of Kansas City-based Hunt Midwest and Dallas-based Hunt Southwest. Ora oversees all aspects of the Hunt entities' existing real estate holdings while focusing on the company's expansion in the Kansas City metro and in Texas.

A hallmark of Ora's 25-year tenure has been steering the real estate company's growth, diversifying its product types and building a cohesive team. During her tenure, SubTropolis, the world's largest underground business park, has expanded to six million square feet of leased space and 55 companies by targeting distribution, automotive, e-commerce, record storage, and government tenants. SubTropolis Technology Center, a mission critical facility, opened with LightEdge Solution's data center as its anchor tenant. The Hunt Midwest

Business Center has grown to accommodate more than 40 businesses including "Automotive Alley," a trademarked, critical mass of Ford up-fitters and suppliers. Another 500 acres of adjacent industrial land is being developed for sale and build-to-suit opportunities.

Hunt Midwest has impacted the residential landscape with the development of more than 5,600 single-family lots in multiple communities throughout the Kansas City metro. It recently re-entered the luxury multifamily market with the Mission 106 project at Mission Farms in Leawood, Kansas. Over the last five years, the company, in partnership with a senior living operator, has developed seven assisted living and memory care communities under the Benton House name.

A native of Chicago, Ora was hired by Hunt Midwest in 1991 to identify and implement potential expansion opportunities. Her efforts led Hunt Midwest into the residential development business, and in 1994, Ora was promoted to manager of residential development. From 1996 through 1999, Ora moved quickly through the management ranks, being promoted from manager to director to general manager and then to vice president and general manager of the residential development division. In 2007, Ora was named vice president of the overall real estate company and then in 2010, she was named president of Hunt Midwest Real Estate Development. She assumed the title of president in 2014 and the CEO designation for Hunt Midwest Enterprises in January of 2015. Also in 2015, she became president and CEO of the newly-formed Hunt Southwest.

Ora's community service stretches from corporate boards to numerous charitable and civic organizations. She currently sits on the board of directors for Starlight Theatre as a member of its executive committee and past co-chair of the Starlight Gala. She also serves on the KU Advancement Board, the Kansas City Area Development Council Board, and as an Advisory Board member of Commerce Bank and the Urban Land Institute.
